The same title 'Blackberries' combines two stories written by Ellen Hunnicutt and Leslie Norris. He relates how it came to be up for auction. He gets a report that there's an elephant loose, causing damage in the marketplace. The mention of berries is not accidental because the image of the berries goes through each story. It all started over a hundred years ago. ChesteronValentin, head of the Paris police and famous investigator, is in London on the trail of criminal mastermind Flambeau. She is dazed by the news, then gets a frozen leg of lamb and strikes her husband with it."Lamb to the Slaughter"The Crooked Man | Arthur Conan DoyleColonel James Barkley is found dead in his home, and his wife, Nancy, is the prime suspect. The mood of the 'Blackberries' by Norris is happy and mellow till the last part of the story when the quarrel begins. For the principal heroine of the Hunnicutt's story, these berries were not something unusual. The story by Hunnicutt was presented by the author in the form of short dialogues between the man and wife who were on a camping trip. The problem of good relations and family interaction is represented by the authors in different ways. He was killed in the street when a pig fell on him.Young Archimedes | Aldous HuxleyA young English couple rent a house in Italy because it has a great view, and a local peasant boy, Guido, makes an excellent playmate for their own son. Get your 100% original paper on any topic done in as little as 3 hours Those two stories also have different endings which is another significant difference that should be noted. After supper he goes to the smoke-room where a woman is sitting by the fire. During his trip, he sees Mr. Tandram which makes him feel awkward because they have never spoken even though they're neighbors.Read "The Japanese Quince"A Shocking Accident | Graham GreeneJerome, a nine-year-old boy, is called to the office at school and learns of his father's death. It does not include Irish stories. The Hunnicutt's story does not end with a radical change, whereas the story by Norris shows that the boy has matured significantly during the quarrel between his parents. The most notable difference between these two stories is the attitude of main characters to the blackberries. Leslie Norris uses the physical traits of Barry's coat, strength in sports, and hands as examples of physical. Stories on this page were written by authors from the United Kingdom. This is no time for conflicting opinions. He's alone and setting out into the world for the first time.Read "The Omnibus"The Reticence of Lady Anne | SakiEgbert tries to smooth things over with his wife. The man comes aboard. A young boy boards the bus, headed for the docks. Curious about it, the narrator researched its history. There are regulations around where people can live. S. They are looking at a rough map they took from a Chinese man. E. Jerry joins a group of older boys who are swimming, but because he is young and foreign they ignore him. Mr. Bates is late for supper one evening, so his wife assumes he's drunk and they start without him. The following essay will be devoted to comparison of these stories and finding the differences and similarities between them. Finally, one can say that despite all the differences these stories have some common features like problems within family and difficulties that may arise in the interpersonal relationships. Mother cares about the economic condition of the family but not about its emotional components – she worries about the high price of a cap, buys all the necessary for the dinner and reproaches her husband for his low salary. An unusual, older man comes by and asks if he can watch the bees in the family's yard. Only in the end of the story she began eating the berries. The berries were the factor that triggered the real reason of mother's irritation and thus, she had the opportunity to complain about the low income of her husband. The landlady wants to adopt Guido to mold him and make money from his talents.The Money Box | W.W. JacobsTwo sailors between jobs want to save their money. He does so well that the President gives him the special task of uncovering all Nigerians who are keeping their bribe money in Swiss accounts.Read "Clean Sweep Ignatius" (Page 9)The Blue Cross | G. The cause of all these misadventures is the Cloud-Men. Bertie's fiancée is concerned about a memoir that could prove scandalous, so she asks him to help her get rid of it. The boy in the story by Leslie Norris goes through two models of relation with his family. In the other story we can see indifference towards each other's interests. All day long the boy could see how the attitude of his parents to blackberries was changing. Unfortunately, the living expenses were more significant to her and the joy of life for her son has become extinct. WodehouseBertie Wooster, an idle and upper-class man, tells the story of how he hired his butler, Jeeves, and his first acts in his service. In the story "Shaving," by Leslie Norris, a sixteen-year-old Rugby player, Barry, changes and accepts the inevitability of his father's death. One should note that the Hunnicutt's story has much less volume than the other work. Before it starts, they hear that a working-class neighbor has just died.This is the first story in the preview of 50 Great Short Stories.An Official Position | Somerset MaughamLouise Remire is serving 12 years in a penal colony for the murder of his wife. We will write a custom essay specifically for you for only $16.05 $11/page 308 certified writers online Comparing these two stories we notice the first difference which is the narration way. K. Norris includes variety descriptions in his story; it concerns the barber's in whole and the haircut process, the father's dinner and Fletcher's Woods. Marriage is mandatory for most adults. Father gives him a treat, shares with the boy the most delicious pieces of his dinner and gives him an approval on the subject of boy's new look. Barry's character and maturity are changed as he dealt with the emotional crisis before him. For him and his father the dark berries gathering process was delightful and they wanted to share this feeling with their mother and wife. NaipaulIn a poor area in Spain, in the 1940's, a young boy lives with his mother. In the story by Norris, the events were described by the boy who made his haircut and had a beautiful cap for the first time in his life. The Hunnicutt's story contains only restrained details. Before Bertie leaves to help his fiancé, he meets Jeeves and hires him on the spot.This is the first story in the preview of The World of Jeeves. H. (32% in)Clean Sweep Ignatius | Jeffrey ArcherThe new Nigerian Financial Minister, Ignatius, sets his sights on eliminating all corruption. Both stories describe the same period of time – the beginning of autumn. They had argued, so he tries to get her talking again, but she's uncooperative.Read "The Reticence of Lady Anne"A Lodging for the Night" | Robert Louis StevensonOn a cold snowy night, a group of thieves are gathered in a small house, writing and gambling. LawrenceThe Bates's lady is in a mining town, and Mr. Bates works at the mine. Guido is a gifted child, with an affinity for music, and a natural understanding of mathematics. Maloney's husband tells her that he's leaving her. While man is interested in woods, swimming, and the other pleasures of camping, his wife dreams about the theater tour. The next item is a magnificent little Chinese statue. The author's use of physical description, nature, and the ritual of shaving reinforce Barry's transition from boyhood to the responsibilities of manhood. The captain learns the man was under arrest on his own ship and escaped. The blackberries for the boy are the source of joy and the way of taking pleasure through communication with father. Things suddenly take a violent turn.Read "A Lodging for the Night" (Pg 227)Bella Fleace Gave a Party | Evelyn WaughAn elderly, wellborn woman of little means comes into some money, decides to throw a big party, and puts careful thought into the invitation list.The Treasure in the Forest | H.
